

Join the Scottish Farm Business Survey

The Scottish Farm Business Survey (SFBS) is an annual economic survey of over 400 farming businesses in Scotland. It delivers an in-depth focus on the state of Scottish farming and is a key data source for important national statistics that help support Scottish Government decision making. The survey will allow farmers across the country to gain invaluable insights into their business whilst supporting Scottish agriculture.

All information and your participation is strictly confidential.

All we need from you is your annual farm accounts, and just two hours of your time.

Once you join, you will be allocated to a member of the technical team, who will work with you to ensure all data is correct and entered in time.

Confidentiality of your data is important to us and you can be assured that your business anonymity will be protected.

We need

1. Your most recent set of annual accounts in either digital format, sent by email, or the original paper documents.
2. A follow up discussion (online if required) to ask a few questions. This will take no more than two hours of your time.

What you get in return

- The farm business report. This set of detailed management accounts will help you truly understand your business finances and, as you progress from year to year in the survey, will allow you to track your performance over the prior three years.
- Whole farm benchmarking report. A business planning tool that allows you to compare your business with other similar businesses, and to track progress year on year.
- Receive a 25% discount on a Xero bookkeeping subscription from SAC Consulting. Survey staff, who are based in offices all over Scotland can offer one-to-one support to get your business set up in Xero if you join the survey.
